Today, we look at more hidden ministries.

When we approach the church building, we observe the beautiful flowers in the outdoor garden. Have you thought about the amount of time and effort needed to make sure things are growing well and weeds are kept out? The “Gardening Angels” would love to have assistance.

After passing through the narthex, we enter into God’s house. We’ve been blessed with an excellent Art and Environment crew who set the flower arrangements, hang the banners and wreaths, and insure that everything is beautiful for our Eucharistic celebrations. Our team needs help with moving flowers, material, and accoutrements. This includes needing men who can climb ladders and carry heavier items from the second floor storage areas. Kindly consider joining us if you have an artistic sense or at least have a strong back.

Years ago churches had Altar and Rosary Societies. The members recognized the parish’s need for clean purificators, altar cloths and towels. If you have time to wash and iron our liturgical linens, please let us know. There also may be opportunities to help with cleaning the interior of the church, so volunteers in that area would be appreciated.

I would be greatly remiss, if I don’t comment on an even more important ministry – being present to God and your fellow parishioner. Parish community doesn’t just happen; each of us has to make an effort. For extroverts, that’s not a problem. For introverts, it is more difficult. In either case, recognition that we are not alone when we participate in liturgy is key. We need everyone in the pews to be attentive and joyful while praying responses with fervor, singing with enthusiasm, and sharing a real rather than reluctant “kiss” of peace. There is always time for individual reflection before/after Mass and at Eucharist Adoration on First Fridays.

None of us can be exempt from active participation. I believe God wants and expects full involvement in our praise, adoration and thanksgiving. It may require a little extension of our comfort zones, but that sacrifice will be pleasing to our Creator.

Next week we’ll examine other ministry opportunities outside of our liturgies. May God give you peace.

Where has the year gone, we are in the middle of summer already. Vacations are or are becoming the focus of our lives. But soon the thoughts of back to school will occupy the minds of some.

Time seems to pass faster and faster, with much to do and plan. How can we cope with this pace in life when it seems like days are too short?

Maybe we just need to evaluate what is necessary and what is optional in our lives. This may be a time when scheduling a day or two for a break from all we feel we need to do to just be still or to take time to enjoy some moments with God and God’s creation. Sometimes disconnecting from innovation is the best way to connect with the true beauty of our world.

Walking with our loved ones or friends through a forest preserve or along a river might just be a way to give ourselves a needed respite from all the busyness and an opportunity to connect with those we love, including our God who blesses us with the gift of each day. Taking time to savor this gift every once in a while can bring a sense of peace and contentment to our lives.

A greater appreciation of the blessings given and of those around us is emphasized when we make them our priority.

Peace, Deacon Sean
